

Minimal change glomerulopathy after unrelated umbilical cord blood transplantation for the treatment of children:case report

Liangliang Ren¹, Ling Li ², Lei Zhang¹, Xin Li ¹, xiaorui Fu¹, Xinhua Wang¹, Jingjing Wu¹, Zhenchang Sun ², and mingzhi zhang²

¹Zhengzhou University First Affiliated Hospital

²the First Affiliated Hospital of Zhengzhou University

February 17, 2021

Abstract

Umbilical cord blood allogeneic hematopoietic stem cell transplantation(UCBT) has been gradually applied in the treatment of patients with blood system diseases. This paper reports a case of a child patient with highly invasive T-cell lymphoma who underwent UCBT after chemotherapy and developed minimal change glomerulopathy after transplantation.

Hosted file

(50\begin{CJK}{UTF8}{gbsn}\end{CJK}\selectlanguage{english})\begin{CJK}{UTF8}{gbsn}\end{CJK}\selectlanguage{english} available at <https://authorea.com/users/396313/articles/509539-minimal-change-glomerulopathy-after-unrelated-umbilical-cord-blood-transplantation-for-the-treatment-of-children-case-report>