

Fabrication of a Mandibular Implant Retained Overdenture Using an Existing Subperiosteal Implant: A Clinical Report

Mahnaz Arshad¹, Nourin Khoramshahi ¹, and Gholamreza Shirani¹

¹Tehran University of Medical Sciences

June 28, 2022

Abstract

A 64-year-old edentulous woman with a mandibular fracture received a subperiosteal implant for fracture fixation and dental rehabilitation. Unfortunately, the ball abutments were covered by soft tissue because they were too short. Therefore, we designed a connector to lengthen the attachment and achieve adequate stability and retention for the overdenture.

Hosted file

MANUSCRIPT-Fabrication of a Mandibular Implant Retained Overdenture Using an Existing Subperiosteal Implant available at <https://authorea.com/users/491852/articles/574709-fabrication-of-a-mandibular-implant-retained-overdenture-using-an-existing-subperiosteal-implant-a-clinical-report>

